Pump selection in a vented (gravity fed) system.

This system uses mains water supply to feed a cold water storage tank, usually located in the roof space, which in turn feeds a hot water cylinder and cold outlets. The system relies on gravity to provide the pressure and flow.

Positive Head Systems

A positive head system exists when sufficient pressure is available under gravity to provide a flow at the outlet. Typically a positive head condition exists where the flow from the outlet is more than 1 litre/min.

Negative Head Systems

A negative head system exists when there is inadequate pressure or head of water under gravity to provide sufficient flow at the outlet. Typically a negative head exists where the flow from the outlet is less than 1 litre/min.

Pressure and sizing

Pumps are rated in bar, which is a measure of the pressure they generate but it helps to know the height of the cold-water cistern above an outlet, as this dictates the static water pressure e.g. 1 bar pressure = 10 metres static head of water.

The following can be used as a guide:

- 1.5 – 2.0 bar pumps for low-pressure taps/showers
- 2.0 – 3.0 bar for high pressure taps/showers.
- 4.0 + options where higher flow rates are required, e.g. full body jet shower

Universal Pumps

Universal pumps are fully automatic, work under both positive and negative head conditions and do not require a gravity flow of water to start the pump. Incorporating both a pressure and flow switch. The pump starts automatically when the pressure switch detects a drop in pressure as an outlet opens.

Standard Pumps

Suitable for positive head conditions only and operated by a flow switch, automatically starting when a gravity flow of water greater than 0.6 – 1.0 ltrs/ min (depending on the pump model) through the outlet is detected.

Twin and Single pumps

Twin pumps are designed to boost both hot and cold water supplies equally. Single pumps boost single water supplies only; hot, cold or pre-mixed.

What makes a pump 'system friendly'?

In peripheral pumps, water is circulated and gains pressure around the periphery of the pump head. They are considered system friendly as they tolerate hot water temperatures and air within the system to a greater extent than centrifugal pumps.
